 By Shirley Downing (Contact)
 Wednesday, August 29, 2007

Bartlett police are searching for a man who took a woman's jewels -- even the chain from around her neck -- during an armed robbery at a model home.

The holdup occurred at 3392 Golden Valley in a new subdivision of $200,000 to $300,000 homes. The area runs off Ellis, just east of Germantown Road.

A diamond and platinum ring valued at $20,000, a jeweled watch worth $1,200, a jeweled necklace worth $1,500 and a wedding band valued at $500 were reported taken.

A Perennial Realty agent told police a man came to the two-story brick and stone model home home at 3:45 p.m. Sunday and said he was looking for a four-bedroom house.

The agent asked if he'd been in before. The man replied: "My wife Debra has."

According to the police report, the man signed a name, Memphis address and phone number.

The agent gave the suspect a brochure and he left.

Two hours later, the man returned and pointed a black, snub-nosed revolver at the woman and demanded the jewels she was wearing.

She said the man put the gun to her head, but told her he wouldn't shoot. Then, he unhooked the gold and diamond necklace from her neck.

He rifled her desk, and then took her cell phone and cordless office phone and left.

The man fled in a late model, black Ford Expedition, westbound on Ellis Road.

Bartlett Inspector Glen Williamson, who is over police investigations, compared the incident with any other business robbery. He said police have no suspects and he couldn't recall any similar robberies.

Williamson cautioned women to avoid being be alone in a business.

"I would recommend if you're in a business and you're going to meet the public you need to have a co-worker or friend or someone else with you," he said.

Anyone with information should call Bartlett Crime Stoppers at 382-MONY.
