Man held in attack on real estate agent

11:29 AM CDT on Monday, March 12, 2007

From WFAA-TV Staff Reports

A man wanted for the attack of a real estate agent was being held in a North Texas jail Monday.

Hood County Sheriff's deputies arrested 48-year-old Matthew Wilson Sunday after they alleged he used the victim's credit card. Mr. Wilson was being held in the Hood County Jail in Granbury.

Officials alleged that he pulled a gun on a real estate agent in St. Charles, Mo., last Sunday, assaulted the woman and left her chained inside a vacant house.

Police suspected that the man may have been planning another attack when he was arrested.
