REALTOR® SAFETY ALERT

March, 2004

The Pennsylvania Association of REALTORS® have been notified of reports of a man in the Williamsport (Pennsylvania) area who is targeting female real estate agents to show him properties, then making lewd and inappropriate advances toward them. At this point, each of the agents involved has been accompanied by male associates or has had the luck of having the owners at home at the time of the showing. This individual has indicated that he spends time in other parts of the state.

We would like to take this time to remind all members to use caution when showing properties to people you don't know and to always put your own safety first.

The National Association of REALTORS® have safety tips posted on their Web site. We encourage every member to review the safety tips and use them in your daily routines. Please click on the link below for more information.
