Realtor Checking Out Rock Hill Home Raped

POSTED: 5:18 pm EDT May 14, 2007

ROCK HILL, S.C. -- A realtor went inside a Rock Hill home by herself early Saturday and was attacked by a man who police believe may have been waiting inside.

Police say the man either broke in earlier or snuck in behind the realtor who was checking out the South Jones Avenue home. The man then snuck up behind the woman, knocked her to the floor and raped her before fleeing the scene. The woman went outside and flagged down an officer for help.

Neighbors say the block is quiet, but has had several break-ins recently. Nothing like this has happened, however, one woman said.

Investigators say they have few clues in the rape. They're having a hard time getting enough information to identify the man because the woman is so shaken.

Police are now warning real estate companies that realtors need to be careful when looking at homes by themselves or with a client.

Neighbors said they hadn't paid much attention to the people looking at the home recently, but now they'll have their eyes open.

Anyone who was in the area on Saturday and saw anything suspicious is asked to call York County Crime Stoppers at (877) 409-4321.
